Business Summary

Photoluminescence is a unique technology that provides illumination using nothing but the ambient light to which an object has earlier been exposed. The applications for such a technology are virtually limitless. Lumonall is committed to being at the forefront of the development and distribution of applied photoluminescent technologies. Through a network of scientists, industrial designers, manufacturing experts and sales professionals, Lumonall brings to market products that leverage the inherent characteristics of photoluminescence to enhance safety, reduce energy consumption and improve the environment.

Improving emergency egress is currently the primary focus of the company's efforts, providing failsafe systems that save lives and prevent injuries by providing critical illumination along exit pathways. These efforts are timed to coincide with changes to building codes in various markets that address the need for improved emergency egress. The systems Lumonall develops not only meet the standards established in these codes, but offer additional options that further promote safe egress.

Concurrent with these efforts, the company is engaged in the development of numerous applications of photoluminescent technology for other markets including transportation industries, residential safety and decorative uses.
